

COAL LAND LAWS ARE MADE PLAIN

Completion of Filings Made Prior to Withdrawal Is Authorized.

INSTRUCTIONS ARE ISSUED

THOSE PREVENTED FROM FILING ARE PROVIDED FOR.

Instructions relating to acquired and existing land rights withdrawn from entry under the coal land laws were received Saturday by the register and receiver of the local United States land office from the department of the interior. These instructions authorize the completion of all filings made prior to the withdrawal, and which had not expired at the date of the withdrawal, and also permits all persons who had within sixty days prior to the withdrawal, opened and improved coal mines upon public survey lands, and who were prevented from filing their claims because of such withdrawals, to file declaratory statements. Following is the text of the letter of instruction: "Jan. 15 the secretary issued the following order: By direction of the president all orders heretofore issued withdrawing public lands from entry under the coal land laws are hereby amended as follows: Nothing in the withdrawal of lands from coal entry heretofore made shall impair any right acquired in good faith under the coal land laws and existing at the date of such withdrawal."

May Complete Filings.

"The above order merely permits the completion of all filings made prior to the withdrawal, and which had not expired at the date thereof. These filings must be completed within the prescribed time, less that covered by the withdrawal. It also permits all persons who had within sixty days prior to such withdrawal opened and improved a coal mine upon public survey land, and who were prevented from filing their claims because of such withdrawals, to file declaratory statements. Claims upon unsurveyed lands within such withdrawals must be placed on record within sixty days after the filing of the plat of survey in the local land office. In no other case will any person be permitted to initiate a filing or make an entry on such lands."

"Any person seeking to perfect a right alleged to have been existing at the date of the withdrawal, in addition to the showing now required by the regulations, submit his affidavit or that of his duly authorized agent, setting forth specifically the conditions under which the claim was made and the different steps taken to perfect the same."

Full Report Required.

"You will receive all proofs submitted in support of any claim asserted under the above order, placing any money accompanying the same to the credit of the concerned for account. But you will not issue final certificates on any claim asserted under the above order except upon the report of a special agent showing full compliance with law. In order that the agent may be able to make such report, you will at the time the offer to purchase is made furnish such agent a memorandum or statement of the claim and thereafter await his return."

"In any case sought to be perfected under the above order which does not come within the above requirements, you will reject the same with the right to appeal to this office. In such cases, notice to the special agent will not be required."

"You will follow, as far as applicable, the circular of Dec. 7, 1905, defining the action to be taken on final proofs generally. You will give the utmost publicity hereto, and advise all persons who had existing coal declaratory statements pending at the date of the withdrawals. Very respectfully, "W. A. RICHARDS, Commissioner. Approved Jan. 21, 1907. "E. A. HITCHCOCK, Secretary."

RESIGNATION IS ACCEPTED.

Wedgwood Named, Instead of Naylor, as Adjutant General.

It was announced at the office of Governor Cutler yesterday that late Friday night an order had been issued by the governor accepting the resignation of Raymond C. Naylor as adjutant general of the national guard, and that a letter had been sent to the state senate appointing E. A. Wedgwood, inspector general on the governor's staff, to perform the duties of the adjutant general pending the action of the legislature, which has a number of bills in hand with relation to the national guard. The salary of adjutant general is now $900, but a bill has been introduced increasing it to $1,800 per year.

RAUCH DOES NOT FEAR MATRIMONY

Secures Divorce and Applies for Marriage License One Hour Afterwards.

FIRST WIFE WAS WAYWARD

SECOND CHOICE WAS MISS ADIE MUNDINGER.

Within an hour after he had been granted a decree of divorce from his wife George W. Rauch, a machinist, yesterday appeared in the office of the county clerk and was given a marriage license.

Rauch filed a suit against his wife, Minnie B. Rauch, some time ago asking for a divorce. He said in his complaint that they were married in Yonkers, N. Y., May 20, 1906, and that in 1901 they had moved to Salt Lake to live. Rauch alleged that his wife had not been true to him.

He said his wife had returned to their old home in Yonkers, and that he had never lived with her again after discovering her alleged infidelity.

The case was tried before Judge Morse yesterday, the defendant was entered present. A decree in default was entered and Rauch given his freedom.

An hour later Rauch and Miss Adie Mundinger applied to the county clerk for a marriage license, which was issued to them.

FROZEN TO DEATH NEAR ELY

Salt Lake Man Meets Fate in Snow While on Fourteen-Mile Tramp.

While tramping from Ely to McGill, Nev., a distance of fourteen miles, Walter Cole, whose home is at 450 South Second West street, succumbed to the cold and was frozen to death Friday morning before aid could reach him. The news of his horrible fate reached his wife Friday afternoon, and yesterday she received a letter from one of her husband's friends in Ely, J. C. Abernethy, telling of the circumstances of the tragedy.

It appears that Mr. Cole had secured a job at his trade of painting and paperhanging at McGill, and missing his train early Friday morning started with two companions to tramp across the country. While crossing a creek the ice broke and Cole went in up to his hips. The frozen garments impeded his progress and he soon became exhausted and unable to continue. His companions being unable to help him, left him in the snow and went to McGill for a team. When they returned they discovered his frozen body.

Cole came to Salt Lake from Denver in September and, leaving his wife and little 4-year-old daughter here, went to Ely to make a home for his family. They expected to leave for that place early in the spring.

Mrs. Cole is left with no means of support, although the letter states that Cole has often told the writer he estimated, and that his life was insured in favor of his daughter.

Mr. Andelin is a basso who promises to win world fame. Recently he was engaged for 300 appearances in Berlin, and in the early spring he will return here for an indefinite stay. Accompanying him will be Miss Arvilla Clark, who is also home from abroad after a long period of study. But before leaving they will appear in a big testimonial concert to be given in the tabernacle on the evening of Thursday, Feb. 7. The program will be made up largely of solos and duets, organ numbers by Mr. McClellan, and a selection by the Tabernacle choir.

BUILDING TO BE IMPROVED.

Brooks Arcade Will Be Converted Into Office Structure.

The three-story Brooks Arcade building at Third and State streets, opposite the Knutsford hotel, is to be remodelled and fitted up as an office and store building at a cost of between $15,000 and $20,000. The building is part of the estate of Julius G. Brooks, deceased. The first floor is now devoted to stores, and this will probably not be altered. The second and third stories, however, will be completely reconstructed and divided into modern office suites. Hot and cold water will be placed in every suite. Two entrances will be constructed to the upper floors, one on Third Street and one on State street. An electric elevator will be installed.

COOING BABE, ATOP A SACK OF COAL, RIDES TRIUMPHANTLY IN HIS PERAMBULATOR

While the present coal famine in Salt Lake has undoubtedly given rise to situations serious in the extreme, the humorous side is uppermost at times, and some of the incidents in connection with the common rush for coal savor of the comic opera than the stern necessity of everyday life.

On Second South street, not far from the Grand theatre, is a small coal office kept by C. R. Curtis. A few doors above his life-long friend, Ed Bolander, runs a coal and confectionery store. Of late, however, Mr. Bolander's business has suffered neglect due to its owner's absorbing interest in the study of human nature as provided by the crowds of people of all kinds and conditions which during business hours literally besiege the coal office in an effort to obtain a share, however small, of the few scanty tons a day Mr. Curtis is able to get hold of for his customers.

"I never saw anything like it in my life," Mr. Bolander was observing to an admiring group last evening. "And I surely never expect to again. Talk about the busy for gold in Nevada, it's not a circumstance to the rush for coal at Curtis' coal office which has been going on right here for the last few days. Everything from baby carriages to automobiles is pressed into service, and if there happens to be a baby in the conveyance it has to make room for the coal or walk. Yesterday a big red automobile backed up in front of the door and the driver bought three sacks of coal at 35 cents a sack, loaded them into the machine and went off with them. The man before him took two years' vacation in a wheelbarrow, and the one after carried his on his back."

"On Thursday the crowd was bigger than usual, when along comes a woman with a baby carriage, baby and all. She sized up the crowd as she worked her way through it, and when she found that coal was to be had for the asking and the money she stopped dead. When her turn came she got a sack, took the kid out of the buggy and put the sack in its place. Then there was trouble. They wouldn't both fit the perambulator, and as she could not put the coal on top of the youngster, she had no choice but to put the youngster in the coal sack. She got them both in all right, but when you have said that you have said it all. The kid wouldn't stick on the top, and I guess they would have been there for the last two years, joined by a length of rope. It didn't take her long to rope the outfit together, and the last I saw of them they were going down the street, the baby tied fast on the top of the coal and everybody happy."

SMOKE UP, THEN BACK TO THE PIPE; CIGAR PRICES WILL SOON ADVANCE

Smoke up and have another at the old price, for as things look now you may not have that opportunity much longer. The price of smoke has gone up and the outlook for the year is anything but encouraging.

The tobacco jobbers are just beginning to raise the price of cigars. The manufacturers have been hard pressed for the past two years owing to the scarcity of tobacco and the increased demand for cigars. They have been unable to furnish the jobbers in proportion to the demand made on them by the retailers, and hence the raise. The scarcity of tobacco dates back two years and is due to two causes, the 73 per cent increase in the demand for cigars and the failure of tobacco crops in Cuba. Some grades of Havana tobacco have increased 75 per cent in cost within the past two years, and the average increase in the cost of all grades of tobacco in that time is 60 per cent.

Many Under Contract.

Many of the tobacco factories will lose heavily this year by reason that they are under contract with their jobbers to furnish certain grades of tobacco and cigars at stipulated prices. The only thing in their favor is that they can set a profitable price on any new variety that they might turn out, as it would not be governed by the prices of the other varieties contracted for.

There has not been a single factory in America that has been able to fill orders recently. The demand for tobacco and cigars is phenomenal, and as a result the manufacturers are valiantly speaking "up against it." Business has been done on very close margins and a serious question confronts these under contract with jobbers to furnish their products at certain prices, and that in their favor is that they can set a profitable price on any new variety that they might turn out, as it would not be governed by the prices of the other varieties contracted for.

Advance in Salt Lake.

A number of local cigar dealers have already advanced the price to the consumer on several articles. One dealer went through his stock Saturday and struck off the "six for a quarter" proposition, making the cigars "five cents each." The Porto Rican cigars have gone up in price more than anything else in stock. But other imported cigars have advanced to the retailer, and it is only a question of time before a general advance to the consumer on nearly all articles will be made.

For the time being, however, the retailer is speculating as to whether he can pay expenses and continue to sell at the old prices. Cigarettes have not been affected by the change, and the market is reported to be about the same.

Tobacco Acreage Increased.

The enormous increase in the demand for tobacco has increased the acreage under cultivation in the southern states and foreign tropical countries. The growth of tobacco cultivation in India has been uniformly rapid during the past two years. The explanation for this increase is that American demand has improved the quality and quantity of tobacco that the planters have found it profitable to grow the leaf. In the Southern States, the leaf is being grown with marked success, and in Alabama the tobacco acreage increased more than 200 per cent in 1906.

HANGS IN MIDAIR ON TOP OF POLE

Lineman Narrowly Escapes Electrocuting While Working Among Live Wires.

IS RESCUED BY FIREMEN

YOUNG ELECTRICIAN TERRIBLY BURNED BY CURRENT.

Hanging in mid-air over an arm of a telephone pole, suffering agony from a current of 4,800 volts of electricity passing through his body, Harold M. Speight, a cable splicer for the Bell Telephone company, was watched by hundreds of spectators yesterday afternoon at First North and Main streets. Speight revived from the terrible shock, but will probably be crippled for life as the result of his awful experience.

He was seated in a cable seat near the top of the pole repairing some telephone wires. The wires of the Utah Light & Railway company are strung over an arm directly beneath the one on which Speight was sitting. His leg happened to touch an uninsulated wire of the lighting company directly below him, and his hand accidentally came in contact with another, thus completing the short circuit.

The wire which his foot touched carried a voltage of 4,800 volts, and the one which his hand touched had a current of 110 volts. In an instant after he touched the two wires he fell back motionless in his seat, with the entire charge passing through his body. The large crowd that gathered saw the unfortunate man's predicament, but were unable to aid him.

Chief Crosby Rescues Victim.

Assistant Chief Crosby of the fire department, who happened to pass at the time, saw the terrible plight of the electrician, and went at once to his rescue. He climbed up the pole and, taking his life in his hands, disentangled the lineman from the mesh of wires and straightened him up in the seat, freeing him from the terrible current that was inching his body. In some miraculous manner the fire chief escaped receiving any shock.

In the meantime the police patrol was called and truck No. 3 of the fire department. A ladder was raised and the injured man was lowered to the ground by Electrician Sheeley of the fire department, Robert Ruttle of the Bell Telephone company and Charles Fraser of the Utah Light & Railway company. The men made a boatswain's chair with a rope and in that way lowered him to the ground.

He was hurried to St. Mark's hospital, where he was attended by Dr. Critchlow. His left arm was terribly burned and his left leg shivered to the bone by the strong current. It will probably be necessary to amputate the leg.
